THE OLD BOOK

One day, in a kingdom far away, Cage sat with his grandfather Minar, his dog Rolo, and a clever bird named Tata.

While Rolo and Tata played nearby, Cage opened a dusty old book. On the first page he read: “When Minar is gone, the kingdom may be left without a king.”

“Grandpa,” Cage asked, “who is Minar?”

Grandpa smiled. “Long ago, there was another Minar in our family,” he said. “And his story is called Minar the King.”

THE STORY BEGINS

Many years earlier, a child named Minar was born into the royal family. He dreamed of becoming a king, but his grandfather taught him that a true king must be wise, kind, and brave.

Minar's closest friend was Clong. At first they laughed and played together, but Clong wanted the crown more than anything else.

Soon every game turned into an argument.

"I will be the king!"

Clong shouted.

"No, I will be the king!"

Minar replied.

THE LAKE AND THE SONG

One afternoon, Minar and Clong walked beside a deep lake. Clong slipped near the edge, and Minar quickly pulled him back to safety.

But instead of saying thank you, Clong grew angry and walked away.

The next day they argued again. Hoping to save their friendship, Minar sang a gentle song about choosing wisdom over anger.

But Clong would not listen. His dream of the crown had become stronger than friendship.

ROLO JOINS THE FAMILY

Around that time, Minar's friend Carla found a lonely dog named Rolo.

"Will you care for him?" she asked.

Minar knelt beside the dog and promised to protect him. Rolo soon became Minar's loyal companion.

They explored the palace gardens and rested beneath the trees.

"When I become king," Minar said, "you will help me protect the kingdom."

TATA AND THE TEAMWORK SONG

Before long, Minar and Rolo met a bright little bird named Tata. Tata was cheerful and loved to sing.

One night, Clong attacked Rolo and Tata in secret, but Minar rushed in and saved them.

He cleaned their scratches and sang a song about teamwork, courage, and never giving up.

Rolo wagged his tail, Tata spread her wings, and both felt safe again.

Together we're strong,
together we fly.
With courage and kindness,
we reach the sky.

THE ROYAL CHALLENGE

Clong's jealousy grew until the whole kingdom began to worry.

At last, Minar said, "Tomorrow we will face a royal challenge, and the winner will become king." Clong agreed at once.

That night, Minar's family and friends gathered around him, singing together and cheering him on.

The next morning, Minar thanked Rolo and Tata for their loyalty and walked to the palace plaza, ready for the challenge.

A TRUE KING

In the royal challenge, Minar spoke about kindness, fairness, and courage. Clong boasted only about himself.

Then came the final test. Clong attacked in anger, but Minar stayed calm, defended himself, and won without cruelty.

The people crowned Minar king. Rolo became the protector of the palace animals, and Tata became the royal messenger.

Years later, Cage finished hearing the story — until he noticed a message from Clong that said,

"We will fight again soon."

Grandpa stared at the message and cried, "Again?"

We will fight again soon.
